Melunga — native check, first English lesson

This is the very first lesson of a language app. The learner is a French speaker who is an absolute beginner in English. Everything below already exists in the app; we only need to know whether it sounds right to you. Please answer in one line each — five to ten minutes is plenty.

The scene

		French-reader pronunciation guide
LEARNER SAYS	Hello!	hè-LÔ
STAFF SAYS	Hello. What would you like?	hè-LÔ. ouot would you LAÏK
LEARNER SAYS	One coffee, please.	OUANN KO-fi, PLIZ
STAFF SAYS	With milk?	ouiz MILK
LEARNER SAYS	No, thanks.	NÔ, THANKS.
LEARNER SAYS	How much is it?	HAÔ MEUTCH iz it
STAFF SAYS	Two pounds.	TOU PAÔNDZ

1. Does the whole exchange sound like a real café in your country? If not, what feels off?

2. The learner greets first with « Hello! ». Natural for a customer walking in?

3. « One coffee, please. » — is this how you would order? If not, what would you say?

4. The key question. « No, thanks. » is shown on its own, as a complete reply to « With milk? ». On its own, does it still sound polite — not curt?

5. « How much is it? » is then said as a separate sentence. Natural right after refusing?

6. The staff lines are « Hello. What would you like? », « With milk? », « Two pounds. ». Would staff really say these?

7. Anything here that sounds dated, regional, or that you would simply never say?

8. Optional, only if you read French: a French speaker reads « OUANN KO-fi, PLIZ » aloud to approximate « One coffee, please. ». Does that get close?
